StrongHold

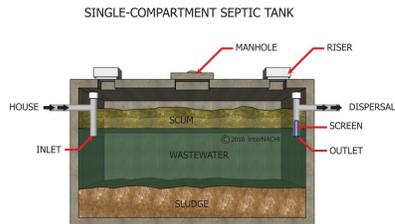

INSPECTIONS & PUMPING

Home Inspections

StrongHold Inspections provides its clients with a detailed report on the home they intend to purchase or sell so they are aware of the condition of the property and the need for any major repairs. The inspection covers the major components of the home including, but not limited to the following; structural, electrical, mechanical, and plumbing. The purpose of the inspection is to identify and disclose to the client major deficiencies and defects of the systems and components of the premises, which are visually observable at the time of the inspection. The inspection will consist of only a visual analysis of major systems and components of the property and comment on those that need immediate repair, replacement, or further evaluation by a specialist. Along with a standard home inspection, we can provide our clients with other major inspection services. Some of the other services offered include but are not limited to a septic/lagoon inspection, water quality tests, and termite and bug inspections.

Septic Tank Pumping

The average single compartment septic tank has baffles that are meant to keep everything but the wastewater that goes into the tank, in the tank. Over time the tank builds up layers of scum on the surface of the wastewater and sludge on the bottom of the tank.

If the tank is not pumped regularly to remove these layers, the scum or sludge could get into the baffles and out of the tank causing a backup into the home or a failure of the lateral field.

Strong Hold Pumping can pump your septic tank for you on a schedule that works for your home and family size to help keep the system functioning properly.

We can also assist you with uncovering the accesses to your septic tank so that it can be inspected or pumped. Then, we can add risers if requested so the tank is always accessible for future maintenance without being excavated again.

Modern Pure Air, LLC

The Original Water-Based Cleaning System

Rexair LLC, based in Troy, Michigan, has manufactured the Rainbow Cleaning System for more than 80 years. Its legendary, water-based filtration system has made the Rainbow known the world over. Today, the Rainbow Cleaning System is sold and enjoyed in over 80 countries around the world.

In the Beginning

The original idea for a bagless vacuum cleaner was born in the 1920s. John W. Newcombe invented the “separator” — a device that was designed to separate dust and particulates from the air. Leslie H. Green saw true potential in this invention and joined forces with Newcombe to develop the “Newcombe Bagless.”

In 1929, Green formed a new corporation named Rexair, meaning “King of the Air.” While the nation was in the throes of the Great Depression, the Rexair Company began producing, refining and marketing the Rexair Cleaner.

Interest in the Rexair Grows

In 1936, T. Russ Hill joined Rexair. Inspired by street cleaners in Kentucky, Hill came up with the idea of incorporating water into the Rexair design, trapping dust and dirt. This innovation made the Rexair a unique and exclusive product.

Rexair developed a new slogan: “Wet Dust Can’t Fly!™”

By the late 1930s, the Rexair was being hailed as more than just a vacuum cleaner. The Rexair’s ability to eliminate airborne dust in the home made life easier for allergy and hay fever sufferers, and soon medical professionals recognized it as a breakthrough product.

Opportunity Flourishes

In 1948, sales of the Rexair Cleaner were beginning to skyrocket. This was partly due to a young salesman from Owensboro, Kentucky. J.V. Sanders — better known as “Sandy” — saw a demonstration of the Rexair and came to Detroit, Michigan determined to become “the best salesman the company ever had.”

He became that and more, helping Rexair to grow and prosper. “Sandy” epitomized the opportunity that Rexair provided, and in 1953 became one of five Regional Managers in Rexair’s newly aligned national sales organization.

The Birth of the Rainbow

1955 brought about a dramatically improved Rexair Cleaner. With a sleek, streamlined design and a motor twice as powerful as its predecessor, Rexair executives decided to rechristen it the "Rainbow."

Rexair's growth was enormous, the result of a great product, the hard work and commitment of its dealers and Regional Managers and the dedication and vision provided by its executive staff.

Rexair Realigns for the Future

The February 1959 issue of Rexevents magazine announced the news — "BIG DREAMS COME TRUE — Sanders and Associates Purchase Rexair." J.V. Sanders was now in control of Rexair, and his first order of business was to fully develop the "Rainbow Opportunity."

Rainbow's Distributors now had the opportunity to be independent business owners, and Rainbow Dealers, Managers and Distributors could more directly reach personal goals of success, security and financial reward.

Commitment to Continuous Improvement

In 1969, Rexair unveiled its new 100,000 square foot manufacturing facility in Cadillac, Michigan. As a result of Rexair's commitment to continuous product improvement, the Rainbow evolved, and an array of sophisticated product enhancements were designed – new attachments, the Power Nozzle and AquaMate, among others.

The new Rainbow D3 was launched in 1980, the first major model change in twenty years. With a new, cooler-running motor, the D3 was the first Rainbow approved for "wet pick-up."

The Latest Evolution of a Truly Revolutionary Product

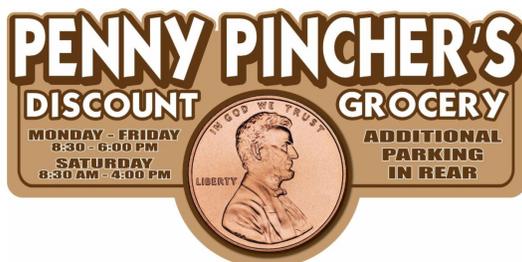

In 2019, Rexair announced the launch of the all-new Rainbow SRX model. The result of more than three years of intensive research, development and testing, the SRX offers significant performance improvements over its predecessors, as well as considerable advancements relative to competitors' offerings.

Boasting more than 20 new features and improvements, including a newly redesigned four-speed high performance motor, enhanced air cleaning capabilities, and 30% improved airflow over preceding models, the SRX is the most advanced home cleaning system ever produced, and continues to be the only home cleaning system certified as an air cleaner by the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers.
